The Employer Brand: How to become a talent magnet

Maureen Scholefield believes that organisations need to ensure that their brand is well recognised and respected in the market.

We are already seeing that good people are becoming harder to find and we are sure that as the economy improves talented people will become more mobile and more difficult to retain. People professionals will need to harness all their skills and expertise to ensure that their organisations have the best people, in the right place for the best price and at the right time.

Our next Circle of Peers events give you the space to think and discuss this issue amongst your peers. Book your place here
